The public are invited to examine the principle on which the field is burnt in this Stove, in their entirely new and pronounced by some of the best judges the best for giving heat and at the same time the most economical in fact of any stove now in use. A few of the many improvements use here set forth:

1. They have no grate in the bottom, the cost resting upod a solid surface. No cold air is admitted to deaden the first a solid surface. No cold air is admitted to deaden the first a solid surface. No cold air is admitted to deaden the first.

2. The air is heated before it reaches the fire, by passing through a hot air clamber, consequently the colai is all consumed.

3. It is alr-tight, and so constructed that it needs no raking, is free from dust, and none can escape into the coom.

4. It is economical; the application of the leaded air, in connection with the fact that it cannot be disturbed by raking, causes a complete combustion of the call—a principle never before obtained in stoves.

A Silver Medal has been awarded this Stove at the last Fair of the American Institute.

The subscriber deems it unnecessary to insert any of the numerous testimonials be has received in favor of the above Stove, but can produce them, with any reference that may be required. [621 Im] L. WOOD, 27 Wator-st.
